Hi Alaina,

I have received the email from Ms. Pritchard, and noted that Mr. Thompson was included in the correspondence.

His continued contact constitutes further harassment and adds to the documented breaches, libel, and intellectual property infringements. As Samantha advised, his persistence represents an additional breach of privacy policy, as he was explicitly instructed to cease all contact. Despite these instructions, he continues to issue false claims and legal threats.

Counsel has all the necessary documentation to proceed. No further correspondence with him is required at this stage.

Best regards,

Tony

Mr. Carbone, Ms. Iverson,

You have threatened legal action and demanded that I cease contact. Yet you have not provided the name or address of any solicitor authorised to accept service on your behalf, nor have you provided any court reference number.

Until you provide proper solicitor details, I will continue to send legal notices to your last known email address – the same address you used to initiate our correspondence and to send your “Formal Letter of Demand”. This is not harassment; it is a reasonable attempt to communicate about ongoing legal matters that you yourself initiated.

If you wish to avoid further emails, simply provide your solicitor’s details so that all future correspondence can be directed there. I am also content to receive service of any court documents at my email address listed below.

This is part of legal due process and failing to provide a address for service may be viewed by the court as a attempt at impendance of that process.

I will take no further action unless I receive a response to this reasonable request.

Peter James Thompson
